LYMPHATIC DRAINAGE: Essential for system detox

Until recently, the most underrated part of the circulatory system was the lymphatic system.

The LYMPHATIC SYSTEM is a vital system of the body

- It is interactive with every organ and is directly related to immune function and efficiency. It is a protector and a defense mechanism against infection, viruses, bacteria, fungi and disease.
- It is comprised of fluid, vessels, ducts and various other organs and structures. It clears toxins, wastes, excess fluids, and infection from all tissues of the body (through proper flow and drainage), provided this essential system is functioning at its peak.
- Lymphatic fluid flows through every organ of the body. If this flow is impaired, the fluid becomes thick and toxic. The parts of the body that rely on it for elimination become less efficient and sluggish as they fill with their own waste.
- This otherwise life sustaining system now becomes a breeding ground for infection.
- When the fluid enters the bloodstream, as is part of the normal process, infection can now spread to any organ or part of the body.
- Many viruses, bacteria and parasites stay locked within the lymphatic system when these conditions are present. The result: physical ailments, degenerative disease, hastening of the aging process, even death!
- Many people have badly congested lymphatics. More and more cases concern babies and children. At this time (in the USA), the lymphatic system is the most over-looked system of the human body. In Europe it is the fourth most commonly prescribed medical treatment. It is seldom that most U. S. health care practitioners consider the lymphatic system's critical role in preventing illness or its importance to the overall healing process.

What are Energy Nosodes and how are they made?

Many people think of nosodes simply as homeopathic vaccines but this is not their only function. Nosodes can be administered either therapeutically (in order to treat a disease) or prophylactically in order to prevent a disease.

Though nosodes do contain a causative organism, their efficacy doesn't depend on the presence of the organism itself. The nosode, distemperinum may be used to treat distemper and the immune response to this or any nosode offers a more natural response to disease without the introduction of killed or modified viruses and harmful preservatives that can weaken the immune system when injected directly into the blood stream. It is important to note that very few diseases are introduced directly into the blood stream. Unlike vaccines, nosodes are said to be safe and many trained in homeopathy feel they are highly effective and valuable tools in the prevention of various diseases.

Historically, nosodes and homeopathic remedies have been most successful in the midst of human epidemics,

Therapeutic Use of Nosodes

In addition to helping prevent specific viral diseases with prophylactic use, nosodes can be used even after exposure to a virus has taken place. If given immediately after exposure, before symptoms develop, these nosodes can prevent the development of clinical disease.

Homeopathy Remedies

Homeopathic remedies are typically derived from plants, herbs, minerals, or animal products. After being crushed and dissolved in alcohol and/or water, the selected substance undergoes a long process of dilution and succession (a process that involves vigorous shaking of the solution). The solution is then stored.
